Samhain

October is the month of Samhain. This ancient Celtic festival is one of the four quarter days, Imbolc, Bealtaine, Lughnasa and Samhain, in the old Gaelic calendar. It is celebrated on 31 October-1 November.

Samhain is noted in the earliest Irish literature. It marks the end of the harvest season and the beginning of the 'darker part' of the year. Winter. It is also believed to be the time when the boundary between this world and the other world relaxes so that the spirits can come into this world. The souls of the dead are said to return to their home places.

This led to many tricks and game which continue to this day. People dressing up, mumming, alongside more serious rituals. Samhain is the precursor of Halloween.

The exiled Irish brought it to North America where hallowed out Pumpkin lanterns replaced the Turnip lanterns of Ireland. So what has this got to do with Irish unity?

Perhaps not a lot except a little reminder that before the English conquest of Ireland we had an advanced civilisation with its own customs, beliefs, music, culture and language, some of which endures to this day against all the odds.

It is also a seasonal reminder that nothing stays the same. Change happens and this Samhain brings us all another year closer to ending the conquest.

FRESHERS

Each September/October when the new academic year begins in Universities and Colleges time is set aside – sometimes up to a week – for groups that are organised within the institution to promote their particular project or events to the new first years – hence the name Freshers. This year's Fresher's has been an unrivalled success for Ógra Shinn Féin. Across the island, Sinn Féin now stands as the largest political party on most Irish campuses. There is a clear desire among young people for big ideas and progressive proposals that can bring about real change in peoples' lives. At Sinn Féin stalls the main topic of conversation was around a United Ireland –

what it means; how do we achieve; and what shape this New Ireland will take. Other issues of concern include climate change, reform of education, an all-Ireland health service and much more. Many students identify with the politics and the objectives of the party and signed up many new activists.

Over the course of the week Ógra, the party's youth wing, successfully recruited almost 800 fresh faces into its ranks, all of whom are very willing to work towards Irish Unity. You can see the work of Ógra and contact Ógra through twitter; instagram and Facebook at: @ogra_sf

DEFENDING THE GOOD FRIDAY AGREEMENT

Irish-America has played a standout role in support of the peace process, the Good Friday Agreement, a United Ireland and opposing Brexit. The years of solidarity, and the positive relationships Sinn Féin has developed over many years, were evident in the visit in September of Boris Johnson to Washington. President Biden and his administration, as well as Congressional leaders, were forthright in their support for the Irish Protocol and the Good Friday Agreement.

Speaking at a White House press conference President Biden told the media that neither he, "nor I might add would many of my Republican colleagues like to see a change in the Irish accords, the end result having a closed border in Ireland."

Since leaving the EU, the British Government has been desperate to reach a trade deal with the US. Congressman Richard Neal is the chairman of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee, which is responsible for a wide range of budgetary and trade issues. Rep. Neal is also the long-standing co-chair of the bipartisan Congressional Friends of Ireland Group.

Rep. Neal held a lengthy discussion with Boris Johnson after which he said: "I shared my strong belief that any agreement reached between the UK and the EU on the future of the Protocol must not undermine the integrity of the Good Friday Agreement nor threaten the institutions it created."

The Protocol is a consequence of Brexit. The people of the North voted against Brexit. While the Protocol is not perfect it protects jobs and business, food supplies and fuel deliveries in the North.

Rep Richard Neal

In Britain there is a shortage of CO2, the pubs are running short of beer, medical supplies are at risk, long lines of vehicles queue for fuel, and there is a scarcity of foreign labour in agriculture and a shortage of lorry drivers.

DUP leader Jeffrey Donaldson's claim that it is the Protocol that is threatening the Good Friday Agreement and not DUP has been widely ridiculed. The ramping up of threats by Unionist leaders has little to do with the Protocol or Brexit. It's about stopping Sinn Féin. It's about the DUP wanting to be top dog in the Assembly.

The fact is that for the first time there is through the Good Friday Agreement a peaceful, democratic way for the people of the island of Ireland to determine our own future. The Unity Referendum is the way forward and the Irish government has a responsibility to prepare for that and not be swayed by the sham 'no surrender' politics of Jeffrey Donaldson.

So write to the Government representatives in your area and ask them to ask An Taoiseach to initiate a process to plan for the future, including the establishment of a Citizens Assembly.

BUSTING THE MYTHS

BUSTING THE MYTHS ON IRISH UNITY

Sinn Féin has launched a series of short videos on social media aimed at dispelling some of the common myths which surround Irish unity, with the purpose of igniting a factual discussion on the merits.

The eight part bi-lingual series of weekly videos focus on the economic and social benefits which Irish Unity can potentially create, underpinned by research published by reputable contributors.

Themes explored include the affordability of unity, all-island education & healthcare, improving the standard of living and symbolism and identity.

Each video is packed with key rebuttal points which are important in developing a genuine and sensible discussion on the merits of Irish Unity.

The series will run until mid November, and you can view each new video when it's published every Saturday on all Sinn Féin's social media platforms.

You can help 'bust the myths' by sharing the video clips with your friends and family.

The role of language in Nation Building

Imeacht tábhachtach a bhí againn i mí Mheán an Fhómhair i mbliana. I gcuideachta an Choiste Aontaithe Éireann, d'eagraigh sinne imeacht le díriú isteach ar cheist na teanga agus ceist aontaithe Éireann agus nasc a bhaineas leo.

Bhí an dúnghaois sin ag Poblachtaigh ariamh, nárbh fhéidir an dá cheist a scaradh ar a chéile. Ó Dáibhís, Mac Piarais, Ó Seachnasaigh, thuig siad ar fad agus daoine nach iad, an tábhacht dóscartha le hÉirinn a shaorú agus an Ghaeilge a thabhairt ar ais mar chaint na ndaoine.

Tá sé ríthábhachtach go dtuigeann Poblachtaigh seo sa tréimhse amach romhainn agus go ndéanann SF beart dá réir briathar leis an pháirtí a chur ag caint i nGaeilge. Bhí an t-imeacht féin dírithe ar thaithí agus eispéireas idirnáisiúnta ag gluaiseachtaí sairse eile agus an dóigh ar lárnaigh siad a dteanga ina ngluaiseacht.

Labhair Urko Airtza Azurtza, abhcóide agus gníomhaí Bascach ar thaithí na mBascach an Bhascais a lárnú ina streachailt. Labhair sé go hurramach agus go follasach agus mhínigh sé na céimeanna áiride a ghlac na Bascaigh lena dteanga a neartú agus a threisiú thar achar ama measartha gairid.

Labhair Mairéad Ní Fhearáil, Teachta Dála ar Ghaillimh Thiar, ansin ar an Ghaeilge agus áit s'aici inár bpáirtí féin. Phléigh sí an dul chun cinn agus d'aithin sí na bearnaí agus an ród romhainn le macasamhail na mBascach a dhéanamh. Is cinnte go bhfuil bealach le gabháil againn i leith na ceiste seo ach is mó a chuideos a leithéid d'imeachtaí agus comhráite linn tuigheáil a bheith againn agus misneach a thógáil uathu.

Ba níos mó na suimiúil a bhí an seisiún a lean na cuir i láthair. Thug daoine as achan chearn den oileán a mbarúil ar an dul chun cinn go dtí seo agus na bealaí airide le baill Shinn Féin a chur ag caint i nGaeilge mar a bhogann muid i dtreo athaontú na tíre.

Tá súil againn ar imeachtaí eile a eagrú san am a bhfuil le theacht ag díriú ar ghnéithe eile de dhíospóireacht athaontaithe Éireann agus iad a phléigh trí mheán na Gaeilge.

COMMUNITY & CIVIC SOCIETY

This month Sinn Féin is publishing and distributing internally to party members – Building The New Ireland – An Activist Guide to Inclusion and Reconciliation.

The guide is a short hand version of the policy paper 'Inclusion and Reconciliation in a New Ireland' which was first published in March.

Unity News has been serialising the original paper each month and this edition contains the last section of the policy paper. The policy paper and the Activist Guide are essential tools for Sinn Féin activists in the ongoing debate around legacy issues, on ensuring that there is no acceptable level of sectarianism and engaging with and persuading those not yet convinced of the merits of a united Ireland.

The paper also sets out many of the critical elements needed to create the context for the Unity Referendum and winning that Referendum.

The Sinn Féin organisation at local, regional and national level has to ensure that the Activist Guide is widely distributed and that discussions are held to maximise understanding of and activity around inclusion and reconciliation.

Ag plé leis an bPobal agus le an tSochaí Shibhialta

Aithníonn Sinn Féin an obair thábhachtach atá ag pobail áitiúla, eagraíochtaí cathartha, ceardchumann, institiúidí oideachais, lena n-áirítear na hearnálacha comhtháite agus mean Gaeilge, eagraíochtaí gnó, comhlachtaí spóirt, pobail chreidimh agus ár bpobail nua chun dul i ngleic le bigotry, éadulaingt agus deighilt.

ENGAGING COMMUNITY & CIVIC SOCIETY

Despite some progress over the past decade through Executive-led initiatives such as Together: Building a United Community, grass roots community-led projects, and other initiatives taken by the Sinn Féin leadership to promote reconciliation, our Party believes that bolder initiatives must be adopted across society to tackle sectarianism. Sinn Féin acknowledges the important work of local communities, civic organisations, trade unions, educational institutions, including the integrated and Irish medium sectors, business organisations, sporting bodies, faith communities and our new communities in tackling bigotry, intolerance and division.

However, all sections of society must agree that there is no acceptable level of sectarianism; that it is unjustifiable; and that every citizen in our community must demonstrate zero tolerance against its pervasive influence.

IN FURTHERANCE OF THIS, SINN FÉIN ADVOCATES:

- ✔ That an increased strategic focus is explored by the trade union movement and employers' organisations in the private sector to promote policies and initiatives which challenge sectarian behaviour and discrimination in the workplace; and to make management and employees aware of relevant legislation.
- ✔ That an extensive publicity campaign is undertaken to raise awareness of the damage caused by sectarianism, highlighting the consequences of bigoted attitudes and behaviour and the cost of division.
- ✔ That anti-sectarianism modules and initiatives are integrated into the education curriculum with the aim that every child in the north is equipped with a clear awareness and understanding of the issue.
- ✔ That mainstream and diversionary youth development organisations are encouraged to bring forward new and creative ways of reinforcing anti-sectarian messages to young people outside of the classroom including through youth diversionary projects with an emphasis on anti-sectarianism training and development.
- ✔ That all main sporting organisations are supported in the development of new strategic sports initiatives to promote anti sectarianism and oppose bigotry and intolerance
- ✔ That the Irish government will convene a citizen's assembly to address the impacts of sectarianism and intolerance across Irish society, which will submit proposals on tackling sectarianism and segregation, and, on the promotion of national reconciliation, to both the Oireachtas and Assembly.

COMHDÁIL: Ógra National Conference

September has been a busy month for Ógra, contending not only with Fresher's, but also its national conference - the first in-person event hosted by Sinn Féin since the beginning of the Covid-19 pandemic.

The theme of the Comhdáil was Irish Unity, and significant interventions were made by the delegates on the day as to what they would like the New Ireland to look like.

Delegates were treated to three fantastic addresses from Michelle O'Neill MLA, Joint First Minister and Leas-Uachtarán Shinn Féin, from Emma Sheerin MLA, who is the party's UI representative on the northern Cuige, as well as Dr. Umar Al-Qadri from the Irish Muslim Peace and Integration Council.

The quote of the day must be ascribed to Dr. Umar who quite profoundly declared that; "Political Unionism, so long the sole holder of rights in the North, talk of their fears, of an erosion of their identity. Let me assure them these fears are baseless: if the Irish nation has a heart big enough to adopt a Pakistani Dutch Muslim cleric as one of their own, they will be grand." How right he is.

At the end of the Comhdáil, the delegates took part in a celebration of Óglach Bobby Storey, Ár gCrann Taca, who was always a source of inspiration and advice to the youth of the party.

At the end of proceedings, all the members were ready, and motivated, to carry through the message of Unity, Peace and Prosperity, back into their communities, colleges, workplaces and dinner tables.

Michelle O'Neill said: "The future of Ireland is in safe hands with such a dedicated group of young Republicans ready to take on the mantle of agents for change in the new Ireland. Bígí Linn!"

IRISH UNITY AT THE BRITISH LABOUR PARTY CONFERENCE

The 2021 British Labour Party Conference was always going to be a conference to remember. In the wake of Labour's 2020 election defeat; a change in party leadership; and 18 months of a global health pandemic; the conference marked the first in-person gathering of the party since the 2019 conference. Chris Hazzard, MP for South Down, and Mickey Brady, MP for Newry & Armagh, were in attendance as part of the traditional Sinn Féin delegation to conference. Their first engagement was the Sinn Féin fringe meeting on the Sunday evening of conference. This year's fringe 'A Decade of Opportunity: Towards a Shared Ireland', also featured Louise Haigh, the Labour Party's Shadow Secretary of State to the North, and Liam Conlon, the Chair of the Labour Party Irish Society (LPIS), as speakers.

The event was a great success and, due to the venue's Covid-related regulations, the room soon met its allocated attendance and many late arrivals had to be turned away. The high turnout and level of interest was aided by some free publicity courtesy of right-wing newspaper reporting in the run-up to the evening.

Mickey Brady chaired proceedings, while Chris Hazzard delivered the keynote address delivering Sinn Féin's message on Irish Unity to the Conference. In her contribution, Louise Haigh warned that the peace process still requires careful nurture and constant attention, and lambasted the failure of the current Conservative Party administration. Meanwhile, Liam Conlon reiterated that any future 'shared Ireland' would have to include the voice of the Irish diaspora and that there could be no narrowing of who participates in any potential discussions in the time ahead. Immediately following the fringe meeting, Chris Hazzard addressed a very well-attended The World Transformed (TWT) rally titled 'The Future of Ireland and the Role of the Left'. This year was the first year that TWT had dedicated fringe events specifically on Ireland. The oversubscribed attendance for this event again demonstrated the mounting interest in the Irish cause.

Chris, speaking to the BBC on the Sunday of conference, reminded Labour that "Supporting the Good Friday Agreement means you have to defend the Good Friday Agreement. And you have to forthrightly demand its implementation and that means its implementation in all of its parts. Which of course includes the provision for a referendum on Irish unity. I think the Labour Party have to set out very clearly what they would do and what limit they would have on calling that poll. That's the information we want out of them and those are the conversations we'll be having."

More Gaels Back Call for Citizen's Assembly

Thousands of Gaels have signed up to a letter to An Taoiseach Micheál Martin and his government to establish an all-island Citizen's Assembly "reflecting the views of citizens North and South to achieve maximum consensus on a way forward" toward an "agreed shared Ireland." Counties Antrim, Fermanagh, Armagh, Fermanagh and Tyrone had already joined the campaign and September saw County Down and Monaghan sign up to the letter.

Down's double All-Ireland winner Ross Carr said that he has been overwhelmed by support since he started seeking support for the campaign. The letter to An Taoiseach states that: "It is the responsibility of the Irish government to ensure that the democratic rights of all citizens are respected and protected, regardless of where they live on the island ..."

Ross Carr said: "I asked people from all walks of life – doctors, barristers, former players, administrators, ordinary supporters – and it was incredible the amount of support for this initiative." Carr is being backed by his team mates DJ Kane, Conor Deegan, Dara Hayes, Kevin Winters and Moira Hawkins. It is thought that around one and a half thousand Gaels have signed up to the Down letter.

In Monaghan hundreds of Gaels have also signed up to the letter. Paul Gibbons who coaches Cremartin Shamrocks GAA is one of those behind the efforts in that county to secure more signatures for this initiative.

Their letter states: "We write to you as Gaels who are involved in Gaelic games in County Monaghan. As Irish citizens we believe that the future prosperity and well being of all citizens on our island will be best upheld living in an agreed shared island."

Paul Gibbons told the Northern Standard: "The purpose of the letter is to highlight the growing conversation taking place in communities the length and breadth of our island about the future constitutional direction of this island and to provide a platform for Gaels throughout the county to engage in that conversation."

He added: "Our letter articulates three main asks of the Irish government – to take the lead in the planning for a future border poll and start the planning for the future re-unification of this island; to establish a Citizen's Assembly and to protect the rights of all citizens."

NO SLOWING DOWN OF THE MOMENTUM ON UNITY

An editorial in the Irish News on 17 September said that should the DUP push ahead with its threats to pull down the Good Friday Agreement institutions then the next priority will be "concentrating on preparations for a border poll."

The Irish News editorial which criticised the DUP, its support for Brexit and its gamble of associating itself with Boris Johnson, concluded ... "The other four parties represented in the power sharing executive would much prefer to keep it in place but the DUP, having backed itself into a corner over the protocol negotiations, has embarked on a different course.

If that is the position we face, then forgetting about devolution and concentrating on preparations for a border poll which was always going to be heavily influence by Brexit will become the priority."

In an interview on BBC Alliance Party MLA Kellie Armstrong was asked how she would vote in the referendum on unity. She admitted that Brexit has changed her mind. She is wavering. Before coming to any conclusion she would want to know what a United Ireland would look like and mean for the Health Service and for education. A reasonable position for her to take and one that united Irelanders must address.

The Tory Party conference saw a panel discussion, hosted by Policy Exchange which included Jeffrey Donaldson, Doug Beattie, Jim Allister, David Trimble and others. However, instead of exposing the weakness of the Protocol for business in the North it succeeded in confirming that the Protocol is working for business on the island of Ireland. Martin McTague, Policy and Advocacy Chairman of the Federation of Small Businesses admitted that his members are increasingly trading North/South. His concern is that this "will weaken the links with GB. I think that's inevitable."

Dr Gerard Lyons, Senior Fellow at Policy Exchange, pointed out that incentives "do work. If you start a new system that incentivises business to behave in a different way then business will respond to those incentives – and if these incentives go North/South, as opposed Northern Ireland to the rest of the UK then eventually if you leave that in place that will have an impact on the economy."

The Brit Minister Lord Frost then confirmed that this is already happening; "we are definitely seeing supply chains being reordered quite quickly. Trade between Northern Ireland and Ireland has gone up a lot in both directions."

Finally Dr Adam S Posen, president of the Peterson Institute for International Economics, and a former external member of the Bank of England's monetary policy committee, was reported in the media saying that the reunification of Ireland will take place "within five to 10 years."

Dr Posen said he believed that Brexit had gone badly for the British state. He also remarked that; "There is no good option for what's going to happen at the border... Five to 10 years down the road, we're looking at Irish unification because the economic forces at work just aren't going to be reconcilable with the political situation."

"...WE ARE DEFINITELY SEEING SUPPLY CHAINS BEING REORDERED QUITE QUICKLY. TRADE BETWEEN NORTHERN IRELAND AND IRELAND HAS GONE UP A LOT IN BOTH DIRECTIONS."

YOUR VOTE. YOUR VOICE.

In July the Electoral Office in the North wiped the entire electoral register. Every voter lost their vote in any future Unity Referendum; Assembly election or other election in the North.

Four months later and there are still tens of thousands of citizens who have not re-registered. The response to the various campaigns appealing to people to register, including by Sinn Féin, has been very patchy.

The Electoral Register was last wiped in the early 2000s - almost two decades ago. Fuelled by Brexit, Sinn Féin's growth, and a myriad of other factors, the debate on a new and united Ireland is growing. There is an almost daily intervention on the subject from a widening range of people.

The constitutional future of the island is up for debate and for change.

That means a Unity Referendum in line with the commitment in the Good Friday Agreement.

The Six-County Cúige has initiated an ambitious and comprehensive registration campaign to get as many people on to the register as quickly possible.

So, if you want to be able to vote the Unity

Referendum for a united Ireland? – Register.

If you want to be able to reshape the constitutional future of the island of Ireland? – Register.

If you want a new future – a better, shared future - for you and for your children? Register.
